What you need to know about the new Provincial Court Family Rules

Posted to Law | 27/04/2021

Note: Updated December 23, 2021 to reflect Rules amendments effective January 4, 2022

The new Provincial Court Family Rules ("the Rules") take effect on May 17, 2021. Based on extensive research, consultation, and experience gained in Victoria since 2019, these rules take a holistic approach to family disputes. They encourage people to use community resources to help with non-legal aspects and to try to resolve legal issues by agreement before going to court, unless court action is needed.

The Rules aim to help self-represented litigants with language and forms that are easier to understand. They also streamline procedures so people only need to attend court by telephone, video, or in person, when something substantial still happens.

What do the new Rules apply to?

The Rules set out procedures for family matters in the Provincial Court dealing with:

- guardianship of a child
- parenting arrangements including parenting responsibilities and parenting time
- contact with a child
- child support and spousal support
- protection orders

under the Family Law Act. They also contain provisions about procedures under Family Maintenance Act and filing orders for enforcement and setting aside registration of support orders.

What can I expect at a Family Management Conference?

Posted to: Court, Law | 11/05/2021

Note: Family Management Conferences are being conducted by telephone, audio- or video-conference. Be sure to read the NP 21 Virtual Proceedings and Remote Attendance in the Provincial Court before your conference.

You've filed a family law matter application in BC Provincial Court, or you've filed a reply to an application. The Court has given you a date and time for a Family Management Conference. What happens at a Family Management Conference? How will it work? How should you prepare?

This eNews answers these and other questions about Family Management Conferences.
